Courses, schedule of the academic year

5. § (1) Within the framework of the Dean's Order, based on the authorization of Section 35(1) of Annex 16 to the Code of Studies And Examinations, the Dean is entitled to determine the detailed rules of digital distance education, as part of which he is entitled to amend the curriculum in the form of dean's order.
  - (2) In order to create video or audio recordings of lectures and classroom practices held by university lecturers within the framework of digital distance education, in which students are not included, students' consent is not needed, the video and audio recordings of these lectures and classroom practices may be initiated only by the lecturer. Video and audio recordings of the student's exam and practical activities may only be taken with the consent of the participants.
  - (3) Completion of examinations within the framework of distance education ending in comprehensive exam or end-of-term exam takes place as oral or written examination conducted at the Faculty through info-communication means. The form and method of the examination is announced as a faculty decision on the proposal of the head of the institute responsible for the given programme, of which the Faculty immediately notifies the students concerned in writing via e-mail, to the e-mail addresses registered in Neptun.
  - (4) The completion of the courses ending with a practical grade may take the form of a progress exam or an oral test through info-communication devices. The form and method of obtaining the practical grade is announced as a decision of the Faculty, based on the proposal of the Head of the Institute which is responsible for the given educational programme, of which the Faculty immediately notifies the students concerned.
  - (5) In the case of subjects ending with an end-of-term exam or practical grade, the mid-term examinations as the condition for signature, except for the conditions for participation in classes, may be partially or completely cancelled according to the decision of the Head of the responsible Institute. If the unsuccessful progress exams written by the students before the declaration of the state of emergency still represent the conditions for the completion of the semester, the students must complete these progress exams afterwards, within the framework of e-tests. In case these tests are not passed, the students cannot participate in the examination.
  - (6) Considering the ban on the attendance of higher education institutions by students ordered due to the coronavirus epidemic, the schedule of the academic year 2019/2020 approved by the Rector is contained in Annex 1 to this Order.

Assessment of knowledge, evaluation of studies

6. § (1) Assessment of knowledge shall take the form of an oral examination, a written examination or an essay to be submitted. For each course, the form of the knowledge assessment is announced as a decision of the Faculty based on the proposal of the Head of the Institute which is responsible for the given educational programme, of which the Faculty immediately notifies the students concerned.

- (2) Oral examinations may be conducted electronically, with an info-communication device suitable for simultaneous transmission of video and audio in the Microsoft Teams program, using a video call. In case of courses which can be completed with an oral examination, the student needs to have an electronic device (personal computer, smart device) capable of running Microsoft Teams, providing simultaneous audio and video transmission, with broadband internet access, a microphone, and a portable camera capable of scanning an identity document (hereinafter: electronic exam, online oral exam).
- (3) During all online oral examinations, an additional student must be present at least online, in addition to the candidate and the examiner.
- (4) The dates of the online exams will be announced in the Neptun educational system. Applying for, modifying or cancelling the exam is only possible through the Neptun educational system.
- (5) The student may use any room outside the university for the purpose of appearing online for the oral exam - without interruption.
- (6) Information on the use of the Microsoft Teams program required to conduct the online oral exam will be published on the following website.
http://etk.pte.hu/adminisztracio\_aloldalak/teams-oktatas-hallgatoknak
- (7) The basic requirement of the online oral exam is a simultaneous audio and video connection between the student and the examiner, which is initiated by the examiner based on the Neptun exam sheet and which the student is obliged to accept. If the absence of such a connection can be verified as a result of the student's passivity, the entry "did not attend" will be added to the exam sheet.
- (8) Prior to the commencement of the oral examination, the examiner is obliged to ensure the verification of the candidate's identity by requesting to present a document that is suitable for personal identification (identity card, passport, driving license, student card).
- (9) The student may be obliged to present his/her environment at the beginning of the oral examination or at any time during it. During the oral examination, no one other than the student may be present in the room, not permitted aids or assistance are not allowed to be used, otherwise the examiner is entitled to suspend the exam of the student and registers the fact of the exam fraud in the records.
- (10) In each oral examination, the student shall take the exam from one of the topics of the previously published list of exam topics. The topic is selected through a random number generator on the website <https://moodle.etk.pte.hu/random/>, in such a way that the given lecturer shares his/her own computer desktop with the student through the Microsoft Teams program. Then, the lecturer activates the random number generator at the moment of the student's request and the student will take an exam about the given topic with the same number as the randomly generated number. The topic can also be selected by the examiner arranging them in a column of 5, face down, clearly visible to the camera before the exam, and the student selects how many rows from the top and how many rows from the right they want to draw. The examiner then selects the topic marked by the student, pulls it out and shows it to the student through the camera. Then the student begins to give an oral account of their knowledge of the topic. The method of selection of topics is determined by the instructor of the given subject.

- (11) Deliberate induction of a technical disturbance during an exam (using info-communication means) shall be deemed to be examination fraud, so if it happens, the legal consequences of the examination fraud laid down in the Code of Studies and Examinations shall apply.
- (12) If the occurrence of a technical disturbance is not the result of intentional conduct, the instructor and the candidate shall act jointly to remedy the technical disturbance.
- (13) If a technical malfunction occurred before the presentation of the examination question, the exam may be continued after the connection has been remedied within a reasonable time. If the technical disturbance occurs after the presentation of the exam question, the exam can be continued, but only once, during which the instructor is obliged to ask a new exam question.
- (14) It is considered a technical malfunction if the connection to the online exam is disconnected for more than 10 seconds for any reason. Both the instructor and the student should try to eliminate the technical disturbance during the consultation within the scope of the general obligation to cooperate (by any means).
- (15) If the exam becomes impossible due to a technical obstacle and the technical disturbance cannot be remedied within a reasonable time by the instructor or student, the possibility of the exam shall be provided at a later time, during the exam period. For the exam missed due to a technical obstacle according to this paragraph, the instructor is obliged to record the status of "certified absence" in the Neptun system.
- (16) The online oral exam is considered to have started with the examination question, after which the student's performance must be assessed with a grade. An examination interrupted due to a technical malfunction does not count as a commencement attempt, it does not count towards the number of examinations of the candidate. The examiner is obliged to record the examination results in the electronic educational registration system no later than on the working day following the examination day.
- (17) The written examination will be conducted through the Faculty's e-test system. The student may be required to present their environment at the beginning of the written examination or at any time during it, by means of a device capable of providing a continuous visual and audio connection. During the written exam, no one other than the student may be present in the room. The candidate may not use unauthorized aids or assistance, otherwise the examiner is entitled to interrupt the examination, the fact of which is registered in the records.
- (18) In each case, the requirements of the subjects to be completed by submitting an essay are determined by the lecturer of the given subject in their own competence, of which they notify the students in written, via an electronic message sent to the e-mail address registered in Neptun. The essays must be uploaded to the Neptun Meet Street system by the students by the deadline previously specified by the lecturer.

It is recommended that all persons participating in the final exam wear a mask and rubber gloves.
- (2) In particularly justified cases (with reference to reasonable, explicit cause related to the state of emergency), the student may also take the final examination electronically, using an info-communication device suitable for simultaneous image and voice transmission. The student must submit their request for that electronically to the e-mail address dekan@etk.pte.hu, at least 3 working days before the exam. The Faculty will notify the student about the request electronically within 2 working days.
  - (3) The defense of the thesis is organized online, which is governed by Section 8 of these regulations, with the student being entitled and obliged to present a presentation on the defense of the thesis while being in constant video contact with the Committee.
  - (4) The written final exam parts can be taken as an e-test through the Faculty's own e-test system. In the case of the written parts of the final examination, it is also obligatory to ensure a continuous visual and audio connection in all cases, given that the student is obliged to provide the opportunity to be supervised during the completion of the test. As part of this inspection, the student is required to present the room where he or she is taking the exam.
  - (5) The practical (demonstration room and / or clinical) final exam parts are held in the demonstration rooms of the Faculty of Health Sciences with the personal (not electronically assured) presence of the students in accordance with the general rules, in a way that all persons participating in the exam must be 1.5 meters apart.
